Nellie Ng is a transformational coach who works with individuals and organizations to support change, growth and achievement that align with vision and purpose. With twenty years of experience in the nonprofit sector, Nellie provides keen insight into the unique challenges facing organizations in transition. She works with leaders to build capacity, navigate change management, and develop and realize strategic plans. In partnering with Nellie, clients receive innovative and evidence-based support in both navigating their current situations and in shaping their futures.

Nellie currently serves as the Director of Corporate Budget and Planning for a nonprofit policy research firm in New York City. She is a core member of the senior management team, providing strategic leadership to the organization. She manages business development, corporate forecasting and budget processes, and day-to-day organization-wide operations.

Previously, Nellie worked as a development and fundraising professional at a number of nonprofit organizations, including The Jewish Community Center in Manhattan, The Systemic Lupus Erythematosus Foundation, and United Cerebral Palsy of New York City.

Nellie received her MPA in Nonprofit Financial Management from NYU Wagner and a BA in Asian Studies from Cornell University.

In her leisure time, Nellie enjoys traveling, the arts, reading, cooking, and practicing meditation.
